DINGLEY DEAD.

Author of the Tariff Bill a Victim of Pneumonia.

Leader of House Republicans, His Life Was Full of Push and Activity.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The Hon. Nelson Dingley, of Maine, leader of the Republican side on the floor of the House of Representatives, and representing the Second congressional district of Maine in that body, died here to-night at half-past 10 of heart failure, resulting from extreme weakness due to double pneumonia. He was unconscious during most of the day, and death came quietly without consciousness being regained. There were present at the time Mrs. Dingley, Miss Edith Dingley, Messrs. E. N. and A. H. Dingley, sons of the deceased.

His Life Full of Activity.

Nelson Dingley, of Lewisburg, was born at Durham, Androscoggin county, Me., February 12, 1832; graduated at Dartmouth College in the class of 1855; studied law and was admitted to the bar, but left the profession to become proprietor and editor of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, daily and weekly, in 1856, and until his death maintained that connection. He was a member of the State House of Representatives in 1862, 1863, 1864, 1865, 1866 and 1873; was Speaker of the State House of Representatives in 1863 and 1868. He was Governor of Maine in 1874-75; received the degree of LL. D. from Bates College in 1874, and from Dartmouth College in 1894.

Mr. Dingley was a delegate to the national Republican convention in 1876; was elected to the Forty-seventh Congress as a Republican at a special election on the 12th of September, 1881, to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Hon. William P. Frye of the United States Senate. He was re-elected a Representative-at-large to the Forty-eighth Congress; was re-elected to the Forty-ninth, Fiftieth, Fifty-first, Fifty-second, Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Congresses, and re-elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress as a Republican, receiving 22,400 votes, against 8,424 votes for Atwood Levensaler, Democrat; 1,094 votes for Charles E. Allen, Populist; 457 votes for Edward R. Ogier, Prohibitionist, and 33 votes scattering.

Asked By Bail For Alienation of His Wife's Affections.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Jan. 13.—Fifteen days ago Fred Ball, of this city, and Mildred Vaughan, an alleged millionairess of Paducah, Ky., were married, and in less than a week the bride brought suit to annul the marriage. Now Ball has commenced a damages suit through Attorney Howell, of Cassopolis, against the Vaughan family for alienating the affections of his six days' bride. Ball places his damages at $50,000. It is alleged that Ball was offered a sum of money to never appear in Court and thus allow the wife to get a divorce. Ex-Consul O'Hara, of St. Joseph, is the attorney for the Kentucky bride in prosecuting her case.

FROM CUBA.

A Hopkinsville Soldier Writes Home from the Army.

His Impressions of Cuba and the Native People of the Island.

Below we give publication to a private letter written by a Hopkinsville soldier boy now in Cuba, to a near relative. It will be read with interest by all who know him.

Camp Tennessee, Sancti Spiritus, Cuba, December 21, 1898—I will try to write you a description of our trip to the much talked of Cuba. On the 28 day of November 1898, we broke camp at Knoxville, Tenn., and finished piling our plunder at the head of the company's street about 7:30 a. m.; at 9:30 the rain which had threatened us early in the morning, commenced to descend, in a few minutes changing to sleet and then snow, while we were exposed to it all. At 10:55 we started on our march, through mud, sleet and rain, to the depot where we waited until 2 p. m. before we boarded the train that was to take us to Savannah, Ga. We waited patiently at the depot until 11 p. m., when with three shrill sounds of the whistle we commenced our uneventful trip to the sea coast, at which we arrived on the morning of Dec. 1st. We laid in the yards of the Florida Central Railroad until the morning of the 2nd, when at 5 a. m. we boarded the transport Manitoba, and by 8 we were on our way across the sea. In a few hours we were out of sight of land.

We are 1500 strong with 120 horses and about 2,000 tons of provisions, besides brigade and division headquarters. The boatmen said we carried only about one-eighth of a load, so you may form an idea how large a vessel we were on; she was 475 feet long by 63 breadth. At the dock the morning we left Savannah there was a boat called the Panama, captured by the light-house tender, Mangrove, in the early part of the war.

On the morning of the 3rd I woke up at daylight feeling rather funny as the ship was rocking a little, and going on deck I could see nothing but water as far as the eye could reach, and then, only then, did I feel the magnitude of this great world, and how insignificant one poor little contemptible human being was.

On the morning of the 4th day we passed the island of San Salvador on our left, and on the 5th day we ran alongside the Crooked islands; on the 6th day we rounded cape Mayti, (I think that is the way to spell it) on the extreme eastern end of Cuba. Then it was plain sailing down the southern coast of Cuba. About noon on the 7th day we reached the harbor of Santiago de Cuba. We were near enough to see fort Morro on the right side of the entrance at the base of which fort Hobson sank the Merrimac, which is now visible above water about two feet, although the papers say it can not be seen, which is a mistake. No part of the town can be seen until inside the entrance to the harbor.

Just one mile West of the entrance is the Spanish man-of-war Viscaya, lying bottom on the coast; about two miles further down is the Oquendo lying the same way just where she was sunk. The papers stated that the battle occurred on the eastern side of the city, which is also a mistake as the sunken men-of-war show otherwise.

The next day was uneventful and on the evening of the 9th the ship hove to off Casilda which is just four miles from Trinidad, at which place the last six companies are stationed.

Ran up the union jack which is the signal for a pilot, the sea was too rough for him to come out that night so we had to run out to sea and wait until daylight, when com-
